Chapter 1: Saved, Yet Bound

Saved at 12 years of age, I felt like... let me just be frank. When I walked from the back of the church to the front with my sisters to be saved, I had no idea what I was doing or even signing up for. I just believed it was the right thing to do. The day came to be baptized, I cried (who knows why), and received my bible and certificate. Still not a clue as to what being saved was really about and why it was such a significant part of a believers walk.

Chapter 1: Saved, Yet Bound

What should have been a positive turning point in my life, so I believed, was really anything but... because at the age of 13, I unknowingly sold my soul to the devil the minute I said “Yes” to the answer, “You” after asking someone what they wanted for their birthday.

~Side note: You know, there really is no easy way to share some of this except to let the words flow as they come. So get comfortable in spite of the uneasiness that may come depending on our relationship or connection.~

Chapter 1: Saved, Yet Bound

So at the age of 13 I lost my virginity to an older crush and it pretty much went downhill from that moment. I was sold!!! Naively, I thought I was God's gift to man. Yes, even at such a young age, a void that I didn't even know existed, let alone understand, led me to believe that in pleasing a man sexually – and the fact that he would come back for more – I was special, that I was needed, and not just wanted, and that I had some type of special control. That's what I identified with and that's who I became.

Chapter 1: Saved, Yet Bound

I did not know that that 'yes' would lead me into a world of dark secrets and anonymity that I wished to hide from forever, or the hold it would have on me for years to come. All I knew is that little simple me, little unpopular me, little unpretty me, little unwanted me, in those moments (however long)... was the center of someone's attention, even if it meant baring it all (pun intended)...
